Fighting COVID-19 With Donation of Compounded Hand Sanitizer to Chesterfield County EMS
#CompoundingHandoff

Richmond, Virginia – In an effort to expand the fight against coronavirus (COVID-19), Rx3 Compounding pharmacy is participating in a global campaign that supplies hand sanitizer to first responders, donating an estimated 500 hand sanitizers to the Chesterfield County EMS. The #CompoundingHandoff campaign was launched by the Professional Compounding Centers of America (PCCA), National Community Pharmacists Association (NCPA), and the Alliance for Pharmacy Compounding (APC). Following guidelines put in place from the World Health Organization, Rx3 Pharmacy has access to formulas to compound pharmaceutical grade, alcohol-based hand sanitizer that is FDA-approved.

“Rx3 Compounding Pharmacy wants to be a resource and assist the first responders in our area, “ says Sonny Currin, Pharmacist and Co-Owner of Rx3 Compounding Pharmacy. “Ensuring our patients and local first responders have hand sanitizer is key to fighting COVID-19, and our pharmacies are ready to meet this need.”

Rx3 Compounding pharmacy is also ready and able to assist doctors and patients looking for customized drug formulations that are not commercially available. With the current drug shortages, compounding pharmacists have the expertise to provide compounded alternatives to over the counter medications.

“As this health emergency continues, we hope the FDA will allow compounders to meet patient needs for the other essential items that may go into drug shortage,” says Sonny.

Compounding hand sanitizer is important, now more than ever, with the supply becoming scarce in many retail stores and pharmacies. With Rx3 Compounding Pharmacy’s ability to compound hand sanitizer, first responders, patients, and the community can help fight the spread of COVID-19. As an independent pharmacy, Rx3 is proud to participate in the #CompoundingHandoff campaign.
